As of 2013, he became the mascot of Blue Sky Studios, a subsidiary of 20th Century Fox (now owned by Disney). Overview During the days of the Ice age, Scrat took an acorn with him everywhere, hoping to find a place to store it for the winter. Scrat also went out looking for other acorns so as to further his storage, looking all over for acorns and nuts. Scrat went on, fixated with taking his acorn until he met another saber-tooth squirrel named Scratte, whom Scrat fell for, forsaking his acorn for a time until he grew to miss it. He returned to his acorn, leaving Scratte behind in a world of dinosaurs. Further on in time, through a mistake, Scrat was responsible for the separation of the continents, which divided Pangaea, the singular landmass, into various continents. After this, Scrat found a paradise on Earth for himself: an island populated by advanced saber-tooth squirrels known as Scratlantis. After finding it, however, Scrat sunk it by mistake, stranding himself in a North American desert. After sinking Scratlantis, Scrat wondered through the landscape with a new acorn in hand. He ended up falling through the ice into a cave. There, he ended up finding a place to finally store his acorn. Apparently, his acorn ended up powering a UFO that was encased in the ice. After confusingly moving the lever, Scrat managed to blast out of the ice and into the cosmos. Up in space, Scrat ended up creating The Solar System, rearranging the planets and causing a collision between two planets, creating the asteroid belt. When the UFO rammed into a giant asteroid, Scrat ended up creating the solar System, rearranging the planets and causing a collision between two planets, creating the asteroid belt. When the UFO rammed into a giant asteroid, Scrat ended up creating the solar System, rearranging the planets and causing a collision between two planets, creating the asteroid belt. up burying his acorn once again. As Scrat had finally managed to store his acorn successfully, the asteroid ended up cracking and made it's way towards earth. Scrat had no control over his UFO, and ended up crashing on Mars, which had similarly looked like Earth at the time, wiping out all vegetation, water and other life form on the planet. At some point in his future, Scrat was frozen in ice and survived the ice ages, some twenty thousand years later, washing up in a block of ice on a tropical beach. Scrat lost his accorn and found a coconut, which he treated the same as his accorn; however, in storing as a happy Scrat cared for, taught, nurtured, and played with his son. Problems would arise between them though, whenever acorns appeared. Baby Scrat had the same love of Acorns that his father has. Acting on natural instincts, any sight of an acorn would set off a chase between them, tussling over who would get it, causing chaos and crazy adventures for both of them. Despite this, the two love each other very deeply, and they always still show affection towards each other. His final known adventure simply consists of him finally eating his beloved acorn. [1] Biography A hapless saber-tooth squirrel, Scrat underwent a number of odd experiences through his life, all while trying to store a single acorn to make it through the ice age. Scrat was protective of his acorn to the point in which he would gladly risk his own life to keep it safe from others or from harm. Avalanche Uh oh... Scrat was protective of his acorn. Hopping this way and that, he scampered through a patch of dried grass and wandered through the icy fields and patches of snow in the search for a place to bury his acorn for the winter. In a moment, Scrat found an ideal place and pressed his acorn into the ground. This resulted in a large crack forming, which traversed up the mountain glaciers and through much of the ice walls of the mountains, where the crack finally stopped and broke off a massive glacier heading straight for him and ran away, stopping fast in his tracks as he looked back and remembered his acorn. After a good deal of tugging hard at it, Scrat loosened the acorn from the ice as the massive glacier coming closer, letting up sharp pieces of ice that moved towards Scrat. Scrat ran from the ice as the massive glacier rolled after him, sliding through the land. Scrat continued to run until he saw another glacier heading towards the first glacier from the opposite direction; the glaciers collided and Scrat, having no time to run out of there, used his acorn to sled away out of there as the glaciers where he could escape being flattened, the glaciers held him in place, squeezing him tight before shooting him out. In midair, Scrat embraced his acorn and screamed once more as he looked and found himself free-falling back to the ground, where he was pinned down by his sharp teeth. Scrat unpinned himself and looked for his acorn, which fell from the sky on his head. Embracing his beloved nut once more, Scrat got up, no worse for wear and prepared to walk off. At that moment, however, a Mammoth's foot flattened him into the dirt, and Scrat, shaken, picked himself up, only to have a Brontotherium stamp on him, followed by another mammoth, then a Dodo, and Scrat then found himself stuck on the foot of a passing Macrauchenia, being stamped on with every step forward. The migration and further north, where he found a small tree in which to deposit his acorn. During that stormy night, through much struggle and toil, Scrat moved his acorn up the tree and found a small hollow space in which to store his acorn. Feeling the bottom of it with his foot, Scrat readied himself to store the acorn in the tree by raising it into the air so as to force it in. At that moment, a bolt of lightning struck Scrat, singeing off his fur and releasing his grip on his acorn. Taking Back Scrat successfully stored his acorn in a hollowed tree and left it there for a time until he found a ground sloth named Sid on the lookout for a snack. Sid reached into the tree and found the acorn, almost eating it until Scrat rushed in and yanked it out of Sid's mouth by force. Scrat left the scene shaking an angry fist at Sid. Directions Scrat later went further north, where he saw a pack of Saber-Tooth Tigers go by one day and continued on trying to store his acorn into the icy ground. At that, Scrat met up with Sid, once more, accompanied by a mammoth named Manny, toting a human baby named Roshan, and a saber-tooth cat named Diego. Manny asked Scrat for directions, asking whether he had seen any humans go by there earlier. Scrat had not seen any humans and, incapable of speaking, intended to mime that he had seen a pack of saber-toothed cats go by earlier to the three mammals by miming long teeth and claws. Manny and Sid did not realize what Scrat pointed to Diego; the saber suspicious of Scrat pointed to Diego; the Scrat pointed to Diego; the Scrat pointed to Diego which struck down Sid. Ice Slide Scrat moved on further north with his acorn, finding an ice cavern wherein he fell down an ice slide and was separated from his acorn into an ice wall, pleased that it was safe until he saw Sid once more, coming straight at him. Screeching in terror, Scrat tugged at his acorn, but could not pull it out and was forced into the ice wall with Sid as the latter crashed into him, only to have Diego and Manny, who was holding Roshan, crash into them as well. The ice wall was thus reduced to snow, which covered them all. After emerging from the snow, Scrat saw that his acorn was missing and frantically searched for it. Scrat then saw a cave painting of an acorn and mistook it to be his own: Scrat rushed forward to grab it but instead rammed into a stone wall, knocking himself unconscious. Camp Fire Scrat later found his acorn frozen in a block of ice and made his way out of the ice cavern. Finding a campfire near Half Peak, where the same mammals that had asked direction from him had stopped for the night, Scrat moved out of his hiding place and headed towards their fire. With that, Scrat pulled out a frozen acorn on a twig: the acorn was frozen over and Scrat had intended to defrost it over the flames. As the ice melted away, the acorn boiled, whistling as it released steam and in a moment, popped into a kernel of fluffy popped acorn, and Scrat sighed in dismay at the sight of his acorn popping. 20,000 Years Later At some point in his future, Scrat was frozen in ice and survived the ice ages, some twenty thousand years later, washing up in a block of ice on a tropical beach. As time had passed, the acorn until a wave washed up on shore and took the acorn with it. Scrat, shocked and frustrated, broke out of the ice and screamed as he ran across the beach and started banging his head against a coconut tree until a coconut tree until a coconut fell down. Happy, Scrat grabbed the coconut, and tried to store in the ground, as he did the same thing with his acorn. This resulted with another large crack forming, causing the it to spread across the island, although Scrat tried to stop it. The crack, however, traversed up a giant volcano, where the crack finally stopped and caused it to erupt. Stunned once again, Scrat laughed nervously. Meltdown Some time later, Scrat scurried up the ice wall, and gets his tongue stuck before he could fall and uses his long tongue to swing to the ice wall, he frees himself by pulling out his long tongue, but eventually reaching the acorn, stuck as it was also in the ice wall; Scrat, with much effort, then pulled the acorn loose from the ice. At that moment, however, a faint rumbling sounded from behind the ice and a small trickle of water squirted in his face; the squirrel blocked it with his paw. Three more trickles of water all squirted out, he blocking them all with his other limbs until one trickle to fill him up with water until he was propelled back by the water still in his body away from the ice wall with his acorn. Scrat then fell down the ice wall, crashing into several pieces of ice on the way until he hit one smooth section of ice. As he picked himself up, he heard a young voice calling out and the squirrel was swept aside by a young platybelodon, who was sliding down the ice as a slide while Scrat tried to move out of the slide's path. Both animals shot out of the slide and into a vast waterpark. Acorn Under Water Scrat journeyed across the ice to look for his acorn once more. He found it floating in the water, under the ice. Joyed, he tries to get it, but instead smacks into the ice. Frustrated, Scrat jumps up and down on the ice, only for him to be flipped into the water, with his acorn on top. He tries to get back on the surface but continuously flips a chunk of ice, and therefore flings his acorn to the other side, while Scrat follows his a acorn, making it difficult for him to breathe. Because of that, he blows away his acorn. Still determined, Scrat manages to get his entire head up from the ice and free himself, with the chunk of ice around his neck. Unfortunately, Scrat knocked his acorn to a floating piece of ice. Because of the ice around his head, Scrat fell down to where his acorn was, launching it to a higher level of ice while the ice was on Scrat, with his end facing up. Far Leaping Scrat was able to get on the opposite side of where his acorn was at. Between the two, was a space that led to the water. In order to get to where his acorn was at, Scrat needed a stick to help him maneuver to the other side. He thus sprinted as fast as he could, leaped and climbed up to reach his acorn, but fell down into the water because the stick wasn't long enough to get to the other side. Fighting the Piranhas Later on, Scrat managed to get on one of the ice slides from the waterpark, which was straight across from where his acorn, and fall in the water, hugging his nut, Scrat was surprised as he saw a school of Piranha staring right at him and then opening their jaws. At that very instant, Scrat swam out of the water and onto the surface running and dodging the piranhas as they attacked him, until one snapped it's jams shut on his paw that held his acorn. Shocked and angry, Scrat's fighting instincts came to him as he managed to single-handedly fight off the piranhas and take back his acorn. Satisfied, the squirrel began to walk off in triumph, until a Condor swooped down and snatched his acorn, taking the acorn to it's nest. Scrat looked up in disbelief. Battle Against the Condor Chick As the dam continued to release water and cracked ice, Scrat managed to climb up to the nest where his acorn was. He spotted his acorn and hugged it it as they were both together again. Suddenly, Scrat heard cracking and looked at his acorn to see if there were any cracks on it. Then he heard the cracks again as he looked over and saw a baby Condor chick was looking straight at his acorn, Scrat gripped it tightly while giving him a displeasing look. The chick looked at Scrat's acorn as Scrat moved it different positions, while it was still in his grip. After realizing that the Chick was after his acorn, Scrat screened while the chick screeched. The condor chased Scrat around the nest before grabbing a hold of his tail, and taking his acorn away. Scrat, unwilling to give up without a fight, leaped after the chick, grabbing a hold of it's legs. The two then battle for the acorn until the nut is launched into the air. Scrat tries to catch his acorn from inside. The condor chick tries to eat Scrat but ends up missing him as Scrat ducked his head. Prepared to fight the condor chick once more, Scrat looks up and sees that the condor but is knocked out of the nest without his acorn, as the baby condor waves goodbye to him. The Dam Breaks The next day, Scrat comes back once again to the condor's nest. Before he grabs his acorn, he looks around the area to ensure that the condor's screech, as he spots it flying away with her child. The baby condor pretends to slit it's throat, to show that Scrat is going to die from the dam bursting. Suddenly, the dam starts to crack, releasing water and then finally bursts open. As the water floods across the valley, Scrat screams with his nut while floating fast in the nest. Saving all of the Animals With the water rising drastically from the flood, Scrat leaves the nest and climbs up one of the large glaciers that boarder around the valley. by jabbing his acorn into the ice each time he climbs. After reaching to the top, Scrat takes his breath, exhausted from the top to the bottom, because of Scrat's acorn being pressed into the glacier each time he had climbed. As Scrat felt worried, the entire glacier splits in half, causing Scrat to grab hold of both sides, with his acorn, and falls down into the water, and washes away. Despite dying from drowning, Scrat's action along with his nut had caused the water to wash away from the valley, saving all of the animals to live on the surface. Acorn Heaven Scrat pops up from twelve dodos. Scrat then runs into something metal-like, falling on the ground. He looks and sees that he had ran into a golden acorn on it The gate opens for Scrat and sees that among the gate were bunches of acorns and grabs as many as he can before dropping all of them and sees a gigantic acorn. He runs to it for a long moment preparing to eat it. Unfortunately, Scrat was stopped from touching the giant acorn despite trying because he was coming back alive from being dead, therefore being pulled. Scrat, not wanting to leave, attempts to run forward, but ends up holding on the gate. Scrat gives one last yell looking at the giant acorn, before losing grip and falling away from the acorn heaven. A Non-helpful Save Scrat wakes up to hear and see that Sid, the ground sloth, had saved his life, by giving him C.P.R. In a flash, Scrat wipes his tongue, spitting from the C.P.R. Sid gave him, until he realizes he's alive again, feeling the ground. Angered that the sloth had saved his life from missing an eternal lifetime of nuts, Scrat jumps at Sid, despite Sid reminding him that he had saved Scrat's life. Scrat ignores and attacks Sid by kicking and punching him. Therefore, causing Sid to run away with Scrat still chasing him as the two run off in the valley. Dawn of the Dinosaurs A few years later. Scrat sniffs around looking for a new acorn on a high cliff. On a much higher cliff, he spots an acorn. He climbs an icy vine, but screams in shock to see that his acorn was gone. Scrat finds some rustling leaves behind a tree, and looks to see who had taken his acorn. Instead he sees a beautiful, dazzling female saber-tooth squirrel named Scratte and instantly fall in love. But as soon as he saw that she had taken his acorn, he snapped out of his daze, and prepared to take back what was his. When Scratte placed the acorn down, Scrat tried to reach the nut and grab it, but both squirrels grabbed it at the same time. Both shocked, Scrat snatched the acorn from Scratte and decided to give the acorn back. When she happily accepted his offer, she attempted to take his acorn, but Scrat wouldn't let go, promoting Scratte to try to snatch the acorn, causing Scrat to snatch back. The two squirrels started to pull back and forth, until Scratte was falling down. He bravely jumped down after her with the nut to save her. Scratt manages to get Scratte to hold on to the acorn while he holds on to it as well. The two give each other loving faces as they're falling down. All of a sudden, Scratte takes the acorn from Scrat, gives him a wink, and reveals that she's a flying squirrel by flying some where else safely. Scrat looks up in disbelief and looks down, screaming, while trying to see if he had any wings to keep him from falling on the ground. He soon falls to the ground, making a dusted heart after he had fell. Rising up from the ground, Scrat groans and then hears rumbling as Manny, a mammoth he had once met for directions, accidentally stepped on him, while running exclaiming that his baby was coming. Scrat angrily looking back at Manny, was then jumped on by a possum named Crash, and then his brother Eddie. Frustrated, Scrat had yelled at the three, until a ground sloth named Sid had accidentally knocked into Scrat and started to walk on him. Sid had launched Scrat onto his had and Scrat attacked Sid once again. When Manny, Crash, and Eddie had stopped at the edge of a cliff, Scrat was still attacking Sid which made Sid knock into Manny from behind causing them to fall down, with Scrat back on the cliff. Bubble Trouble Scratte was running on a try until Scrat grabbed her by her tail in a hole. The two were found to be trapped in a bubble together, for which they both screamed separating the bubble into two bubbles, with the squirrels in their own bubble. They suddenly noticed that the acorn but couldn't because of how strong the tar bubble was. Scratte on the other hand, thought differently, by running in place, as if she was in a hamster wheel, and lifted her bubble up. Scrat trying to do the same thing ended up sinking down but then started to push the bubble up. the way. Scrat did the same thing again. When he was close to getting the acorn, Scratte knocked him out of the way. This made Scrat lose balance and cause his canine teeth to make a hole into the bubble, blowing him into Scratte, knocking her out of the area. The bubble that Scrat was in started to deflate even more, until it was small enough where he had no space at all, until his whole entire body came out of the bubble, except for his head. Noticing that his acorn had popped, leading Scrat and his acorn to fall down to the ice with hard impact, falling down to an underground world. A Sticky Situation Scrat was found to be stuck to a tree in the under world ground of dinosaurs because of the left over tar that had popped on him. Scrat looked down and saw his acorn lying on the ground. Scrat was very close to getting his acorn, because he was still stuck to the tree down, landing on him. tar also stuck on it. After a few attempts, Scrat was able to get his acorn to stick on him. Unfortunately for Scrat, he was rolled in place by Scratte bounces over to Scrat and slowly touches and grabs the stem of his acorn. Knowing what she's going to do, Scrat gives out a quiet whimper and looks at Scratte, as she rips the acorn right off of Scrat, in addition to some of his chest fur. Scrat and Scratte had jumped on a Saber-tooth tiger named Diego, while he was resting with his herd in the world of dinosaurs. The two squirrels continued to fight over the acorn in a part of the jungle, until Scratte would have the acorn until one of them decides to take back. When it seemed that Scratte had won the acorn after purposely injuring Scrat, Scratte tried to fool Scrat with her flying abilities. acorn in his paws, satisfied, until Scratte dropped in his paws. Waking up, Scratte noticed that she and Scrat were safely away from the lava and saw she was in his arms. Realizing that Scrat had pushed it away, and both Scratt and Scratte had kissed, revealing that they were considered to find love. Alone Again (Naturally) When Scratt and Scratte were together, now as a couple, they went through many different adventures, while the acorn was sitting lonely. The song "Alone Again (Naturally)" had played to show the acorn's point of view of Scrat leaving it for Scratte at that point of time. Reunited Scrat and Scratte were living together in a tree decorating the place. While Scratte was setting up flowers, she became very bossy towards Scrat notices that his acorn was sitting at the top of a cliff. Scrat looking sighing heavenly, looks back at Scratte, as she's to busy decorating, and decides to dump Scratte and run off after his acorn. While Scrat then hugs the acorn and starts to spin around happily, until he stops and sees Scratte right in front of him.

Scrat nervously laughs and Scratte snatches the acorn on the ground, and starts to jump up and down on it. Scrat, knowing what happens if she continues to jump up and down on it. Scrat, knowing what happens if she continues to jump up and down on it.

When the ground as if it was a rocket, with the acorn on top. The two then try to climb up the rocket like rock as it started to break apart. When the reach to the top, they both grab on the acorn. Scratte tries to fool Scrat again by pulling a sweet smile. But Scrat doesn't get fooled, and he winks at her just like she had done to him in the beginning, and then grabbed the acorn. This made Scratte fall back to the Dinosaur World. Scrat then crashes up back to the acorn. Knowing that he'd finally won, Scrat started to cheer and dance, making fun of Scratte as he held on to the acorn. Scratte shakes an angry fist at him from below. When Scrat started to wave the acorn from the hole he created, the ice that he knocked from it's place, had fell back down, and knocked the acorn out of Scratt's paws. Scrat travels on a mountain with a new acorn to store. He sniffs an ice cap, a finds a perfect place to store his nut. When Scrat hit the ice, it starts to crack, so to prevent trouble, Scrat grabbed some ice to place back into the small hole his acorn had made. When Scrat merely touches the ice with the tip of his acorn, it ends up instantly breaking the entire mountain below the ice cap. Scrat gets his acorn and falls into the rift, passing by the Dinosaur World, where he sees a Weasel named Buck mounting his dinosaur nemesis Rudy, a Baryonyx, while he goes, and ends passing through all of Earth's layers, eventually arriving at the metallic sphere, which composes the inner core. While pursuing his acorn, Scrat makes the core spin and breaks Pangaea into the contemporary continents like Australia, creating giraffes by making their necks stretch while Africa is being separated, and making the boot-shaped Italian Peninsula kick a nearby island (accompanied by a scream of "GOAL!") during its formation. Scrat eventually trips and starts bumping between the sphere and the solid outer core, creating a Scrat like Moai, a Scrat Sphinx (which loses its nose when it falls off), and 4 Scrat faces on Mount Rushmore. Scrat later picks up balance and grabs his acorn, but ends up spinning in the core until he's thrown out of the rift into the upper atmosphere. While falling, Scrat positions his body as if he would fall into the sea, but ends up crashing on a piece of ice, which breaks in half, which separates Scrat from his acorn. Scrat then proceeds to scream in frustration. Treasure Map Later on during the day, Scrat was found to be still floating on his ice float until he spots an island. He rows to the island and takes a rest at the bottom of a coconut tree. Scrat the spots a skeleton of a Deceased saber-tooth squirrel. He becomes scared and then jumps away. Later, he investigates the skeleton. He follows the deceased saber-tooth squirrel's arm and sees an acorn very deep underwater. Scrat then comes up with a plan. The plan was to jump into the way down, Scrat's physical features and his entire body becomes very thin due to the acorn sees that it had pictures. He follows where the pictures lead to and finds out that the acorn is a treasure map to get to an island full of acorns.
Scrat gasps of joy, but loses his oxygen, until he hurries and catches a few of the molecules to suck back up in order gain them back. Scrat starts to follow where the map takes him. All of a sudden, a marlin skeleton slices through the acorn a little bit, with it's sharp spear-like snout almost touching Scrat's throat. With a flash, Scrat is pulled by it underwater while crashing into seaweed, a salmon and a crab, until he finally comes out of the ocean and crashes into an ice floe, while dressed up like a mermaid. The marlin skeleton was revealed to be the anchor of a giant ice floe, while dressed up like a mermaid. mammoth, Diego, a Saber-tooth tiger, Sid, a Ground Sloth, and Granny, another Ground Sloth by a group of pirates led by their captain, Gutt, a Gigantopithecus. While the captured mammals were all tied up, Scrat was avoiding to get hit by any sea stars, as one of the pirates named Squint was throwing them at him. Later on, when the ship was destroyed and began to sink, Scrat managed to escape by knocking a Rat off, while sliding on a vine to the sea. Flying Scrat had ended up on Switchback Cove, and needed to some how leave the island. In order to do that, he used one of the leaf planes that the Hyraxs used during Manny's diversion, placing the treasure map on his head, and jumped of a cliff to fly on. Unfortuantely, with the wind so strong, and from the opposite side he was on, it blew him straight into the cliff a few times. Just when Scrat finally thought he was flying, a shark had suddenly jumped up from the water and ate him. Siren Later on that night, Scrat was traveling on a sphere made of ice. He was spotted by Sirens and they were hungry after failing to lure Manny, Sid, Diego, and Granny. While Scrat was too busy focusing on where he needed to go, one of the sirens took the form of Scratte a loving look, but quickly turned her down (possibly remembering the incident between them in them in the last film). Due to this, the siren had then turned into an acorn, which had grabbed Scrat's attention more. This prompted Scrat to run over to the acorn down and started to jump on it with the intention of burying it on the ground, killing the siren in the process. This made the other sirens angry, come up from the ocean, hiss at Scrat, and take the form of giant acorns, attacking Scrat had managed to get away. Scratlantis Possibly a few days later, Scrat was extremely exhausted still floating in the ocean. But Scrat looked up and found the island full of nuts after noticing that the acorn treasure map had a distinct shape too it. Happy, Scrat swam to the island. As Scrat was amazed and looked at the wonderful scenery that the island had, he was flung onto land. Then, a Saber-tooth squirrel by the name of Ariscratle had developed grasping thumbs, took his paw. Ariscratle welcomed and showed Scrat Scratlantis, revealing that was the island, along with saber-tooth squirrels that were similar to his and Scratte's species. Scrat noticed many types of ways that the acorns were being used, from ending up in sculptures, to being used as apart of hot tubs and drinks. Seeing that these were the most acorns he'd ever have and overpowered with the obsession of acorns, Scrat yelled with joy, and began collecting as many of the acorns as he could find, hoarding them all in a pile and taking anything acorn-themed as well, from the acorn-shaped pin that held one squirrel's tunic up to the giant acorns that held the temple columns in place. (As he was doing this, the Symphony No. 9: Ode to Joy, composed by Beethoven had played). As Scrat had collected almost all of the acorns, much to the rest of the squirrels' shock, he noticed the biggest acorn was in the middle of the island and run over trying to take it out. All of a sudden, Ariscratle had stopped Scrat, telling him that he should let go of his base animal desires for accorns. When Scrat started to understand and tried to resist, the desire for more accorns had got to him, causing him to pull the giant accorn out. The accorn turned out to be the plug of the entire city and

Scrat confusing pulls the leaver that the acorn is on only for the ship to suddenly take off, the ship zooms into space and crashes into the Moon, causing it to hit several other planets causing them to bounce around and bump into each other as if they were billiard balls (the Moon is the cue ball) that ends up forming the Solar System which incidentally gives two planets new appearances (Jupiter's Great Red Spot is formed when Mars bumps into it, leaving a red splotch-like bruise on its surface; while Saturn is bumped into its look. Scrat has a moment of silence, until his foot slid down a switch, causing the ship to be launched back away from Earth. Trying to get back to Earth, Scrat pushes multiple buttons, until he activates a gravitational switch, where the UFO creates artificial gravity, causing Scrat, his acorn, and a few devices to float. Scrat then hurries down, to turn the switch off, bringing him and the objects back down. Seeing his acorn, Scrat runs for it, but unknowingly turns the switch back on, only this time, switching it to a gravitational pull. Just when Scrat reaches for his acorn, the gravity pulls him down and he's unable to get his acorn. As Scrat struggles to get back up, his skin gets pulled down revealing his skeleton, and also causes his teeth to to fall, piercing his tongue. Finally, Scrat gets a hold of his acorn, but the acorn starts to roll where Scrat lied. Scrat tried to cute escape, but the acorn ended up rolling over him. Scrat groaned ends up flushing the acorn, and releases it outside the UFO. Scrat watches his acorn float in space, screaming it. He ends up targeting it, and attracts it to his ship. Apparently, Scrat was also attracting the moon to himself. To avoid this upcoming collision, Scrat swings the attraction and ends up letting go of the moon, causing it to rotate around the earth really fast, bringing up the tides. This unexpected action, actually helps The Herd pass under a river that was blocking them from travelling to their destination from saving the world. Mars Neil deBuck Weasel then takes us to Mars to show that it was once a hospitable planet. He explains that it used to look a lot like Earth. He ends up questioning what had happened to the planet, where all the water and life form had went. This changes when Scrat shows up. Unable to keep control of his ship, he crashes onto Mars, instantly drying the place out and wiping out all vegetation, water and other life form on the planet, making Mars uninhabitable. grabs Scrat and refuses to let go. The baby has imprinted on Scrat, making him his father, and he tearfully begs Scrat not to go. Just then, something snaps in Scrat's mind. He now has another priority in his life besides protecting his acorn. Baby Scrat's cuteness melts Scrat's heart this moment, and he happily embraces him as his new father. For a while Scrat is overjoyed with Baby Scrat, teaching him how to walk, playing peek-a-boo, watching the stars, and frolicking about. But a long time later, Baby Scrat feels a twitch in his tail, and he goes to investigate. Scrat follows him, curious about what he's done, and realizes to his horror, that Baby Scrat has inherited the same obsession that he has...ACORNS...and Scrat sees he has one in his paws. At that moment, Scrat's brain launches into chaos, making him become extremely jealous and frustrated that Baby Scrat is turning out to be more like him. Abruptly back and forth, Scrat goes from his natural instincts to maternal instincts, laughing and growling almost at the same time. However, Scrat ends up breaking a cliffside AGAIN in the process, with only the acorn separating him from falling. Seeing his father in trouble, Baby Scrat approaches, as Scrat happily begs him to help. Baby Scrat reaches for his paw...then his natural instincts kick in and he grabs the acorn again. With nothing now separating him between him and the ground, Scrat plummets down into the canyon, screaming all the way. Baby Scrat laughs at his father's crazy antics, and then once again attempts to eat the acorn, ending the episode. Sleepless Night (TBA-Scrat Tales) A Lesson, Trap, and Backfire (TBA-Scrat Tales) Mirror Madness Scrat and Baby Scrat are once again arguing over who gets ownership of the acorn. While in a tug-of-war, the two accidentally fling the acorn, each trying to race each other to see who gets it first.

 Before they can reach the acorn though. Scrat nearly runs into an ice wall, which reflects himself. Terrified at the sight of it. Scrat and Baby Scrat scream and cower, but soon realize it's harmless. When Scrat takes a look at himself, his reflection is distorted, like a fun house mirror. Finding it humorous, Scrat starts making silly faces at it, and bab Scrat joins in babbling at it too. Both he and Scrat laugh together, when they notice the acorn in the corner. Once again, they race to get it, but little do they know, the reflection of Scrat tries to reach it. Noticing this, Scrat teases Baby Scrat by holding the acorn too high out of his reach. Baby Scrat gets distracted though, realizing that the sentient reflection of Scrat has become tall and evil-looking, with disheveled fur. Nervously, Baby Scrat watches as the reflection holds the acorn too high out of his reach, just like Scrat did to Baby Scrat. Feeling ashamed, Scrat nervously apologizes to Baby Scrat, who is flashing him a look of disappointed shame. Just then, the situation goes from bad to worse when a crazed Baby Scrat reflection also shows up, terrifying both Scrat and Baby Scrat, and the two reflections get in a vicious fight, which is much much worse than any of the past arguments Scrat and Baby Scrat have had. Realizing their errors, both make it up to each other, as Baby Scrat hold Scrat's paw again, showing that unlike the reflections, no matter their differences, they still love each other deep down and they should show that love more often. The fighting though gets so bad between the reflections that it starts to cause the cavern to collapse. Acting on maternal instincts again, Scrat carries Baby Scrat over his shoulder and sprints to get out of the cavern before it breaks apart. As the dust clears, Scrat is relieved to be unharmed, but realizes to his horror, Baby Scrat is no longer in his arms. Scrat panics and searches around, but there is no sign of his son. Fearing the worst, Scrat, distraught and heartbroken, starts to cry, his eyes filling up with tears. But something tugs his tail, and Scrat turns around to see that Baby Scrat is alive and argument, and then both shrugging innocently knowing that no matter how much they love each other, there still will always be problems between them and acorns, ending the episode. Between a Log and a Hard Place (TBA-Scrat Tales) Losing the Acorn (...Again) and Living Happily (Almost) (TBA-Scrat Tales) Personality and Traits As a saber-tooth squirrel, Scrat was small and furry with pink Fingers, pink Toes, long Gray Bushy tail and gray torso. Scrat was almost always in the company of his beloved acorn. Through Scrat's instincts and interests being driven on finding a safe place to stow his acorn, he was capable of much, from fighting off a school of piranha single-handedly to surviving in conditions and stress that would severely harm other animals, from being stomped on, burned alive, electrocuted and even launched into space (more than once). Scrat makes up for his inability to play with his fearlessness and persistence. He's very close to his prized acorn, keeping it close to him at all times and distressing or even losing his mind whenever it was lost. Scrat was obsessed over his beloved nut, a state of mind coupled with a lack of common sense and awareness to his surroundings, yet Scrat was not wholly incapable of other emotions. Upon meeting Scratte, Scrat formed a rivalry with her but he still saved her from falling to her death and they fell in love almost at once, forgetting all about his acorn for a time. He ends up getting better at being aware of his surroundings during the franchise. Appearances has a collection of images and media related to Scrat/Gallery. Behind the Scenes Scrat was voiced in all his appearances by director Chris Wedge, who gave the species an undisclosed scientific name, was a fictional animal that he developed for the first Ice Age film, its name an amalgam of "squirrel" and

"rat". In 2011, scientists in Argentina uncovered the remains of an extinct, shrew-like mammal with long fangs which was dubbed Cronopio dentiacutus, in tribute to Scrat, which resembles Cronopio dentiacutus, in tribu was made a more important character, made mute for comedic purposes and vital to the story's advancement - for without Scrat, the first real snow and ice sequence wouldn't take place until about 37 minutes into the film. [3] Writer Michael J. Wilson has stated before that his daughter Flora came up with the idea for a creature that was the mixture of a squirrel and a rat, dubbing it Scrat and deciding that Scrat was after his acorn. [4] Disputed Accounts of Scrat's Creation is disputed. Fashion designer Ivy "Supersonic" Silberstein designed a character named "Sgrat" on May 19, 1999. She has gone on to claim that her character was stolen and repurposed by Blue Sky Studios for Ice Age's Scrat back in 2002. She later settled a trademark lawsuit with Disney in 2020; resulting in her acquiring a trademark for her "Sqrat" character. [5]. Ivy would then claim that Scrat would be removed from the Ice Age franchise (this was said to be responsible for his absence in Buck Wild). However, with the release of Scrat Tales, it appears that Disney still owns Scrat separately from Ivy's Sqrat character. An analysis on the controversy with input from both parties can be read via the Insider website. Ice Age Village Scrat is a major part in Ice Age Village. He can be seen stealing accorns and if you tap on him you get 2,000 coins. Many decorations are also based off of Scrat such as the

Also when you expand your village Scrat plants his acorn and cracks the ground giving you more space. Bellyful of ice Trivia Cronopio dentiacutus The saber-tooth squirrel is a fictional creature, as explained by Chris Wedge, who voices Scrat. In 2011, scientists in Argentina uncovered the remains of an extinct, shrew-like mammal with long fangs which was dubbed Cronopio Dentiacutus, in tribute to Scrat, which resembles Cronopio. [6] Scrat has 887 joints, which that's over four times as many as a human. [7] Although the majority of the main characters are aware of his presence, Scrat is the only main character of the Ice Age series to not follow along with the rest of the main characters on their adventures. Nevertheless, his actions throughout every movie have always indirectly impacted the group greatly one way or another. The only times Scrat doesn't interact with the herd is in the fifth and sixth movies. Scrat is mostly unable to talk. The only sounds he can make is when he's muttering, moaning, yelling, screaming, sighing, and excited having his accorn. However, he very briefly speaks in the second movie, saying a single word-"peep"-in an attempt the mimic the baby vulture so he can get away from his actions without consequences. It is unknown on whether Scrat froze before or after the sequels. It is possible that he froze after the films and all of the sequels take place before he froze at some point. He may have traveled back in to his time period using the machine from No Time For Nuts. Scrat is one of several solitary creatures, others being a Glyptodon heading South by itself, Rose, Fast Tony, Cholly, a hawk, the Secretary Bird, Scratte, the Archaeopteryx, Giant Crab, a small crab, sharks, a fish, Precious, and Francine. Scratt makes a cameo in the Family Guy episode "Sibling Rivalry", where he quarrels with Peter Griffin over acorns. References
